WEST INDIES' TIN WARRIORS

Since his death nobody has arisen strong enough to preserve order among the unruly Dominicans.

Ex-President Jinenez, in whose behalt this latest revolution is said to have been started, has a big reputation in the West Indies as "the man who euchred Uncie Sam." He is credited with an amusing little coup of his own at the expense of the United States government just after the declaration of war with Spain. General Gomez, the famous Cuban leader, was a Dominican by birth and a friend of Jimenez. He gave Jimenez a letter of recommendation to the war department, and that plausible person, so the story goes, persuaded the officials to equip the steamship Fanita with 3,000 rifles and 3,000,000 cartridges, and to intrust it to himto land an expedition to assist Gomez. But instead of going to Cuba, Jimenez landed in Santo Domingo and "made a little hell of his own."

He started a revolution, but his filitusters were beaten by the troops of Heureaux and he had to fly. Heureaux threatened awful things against the United States for "aiding an armed invasion of a friendly power." Warlike proclamations were published in Santo Domingo, but the facts did not come, out here. The authorities at Washington, unwilling to admit publicly that they had been "buncoed" by Jimenez, put some New York bondholders on Heureaux's track. They sent an emissary to Santo Domingo, who persuaded Heureaux that he had better quit unless he wanted to be pressed for the money he owed.

he wanted to be pressed for the money he owed.

Jimenez became President after the death of Heaureaux. He was deposed by his own vice president, Vaquez, who, in turn, was kleked out by Wos y Gil, against whom the present revolution is directed. Jimenez is a wealthy man, having made several millions of dollars as a merchant in Santo Domingo. When in power he encouraged the development of his country by American capital, and that was the main cause of his downfall. Naturally he is well liked by the Americans who live in Santo Domingo or have pecuniary interests there. As Dominican politicians go, he is able and enlightened, but he is not a good fighter—a fatal drawback for a man of his aspirations. He generally stays in New York when out of power, puts up the money and lets other people do the fighting. limenez became President after the McAndrew or any other good Scotch engineer frantic—it was so covered with dirt and rust. But the black and mulatto officers on the quarterdeck atoned for all shortcomings. They were gorgeous to behold in their uniforms of white, blue, crimson, yellow, silver and gold. Some of them were real "horse marines," wearing beautifully polished Hessian boots and spurs!

The foreign residents of Port-au-Prince tell a story of Haiti's greatest naval engagement. It happened several years ago, before the building of the Crete-a-Pierrot. Haiti's navy then consisted of three leaky, rusty old tramp steamers, armed with a few ancient cannon, which were far more dangerous to the gunners than to the enemy.

Germany, having dunned Haiti in count of outrages committed on German subjects during a revolution, at last sent a squadron of three ships to collect the money. The German commodore delivered his ultimatum. "You must pay the money before noon," he said, "or I shall take your ships."

The president and his cabinet were defiant. They felt sure that their brave admiral and his sailors could vanquish the enemy with horrible slaughter.

A Bit of German Humor.

Punctually at noon the shores of the harbor were lined with people waiting to see the glorious victory. Presently they saw the German ships putting out to sea, chased by the invincible armada of Haiti. Patriotic enthusiasm was at the boiling point. But, what was this? The gallant admiral and his heroic men were observed jumping was at the boiling point. But, what was this? The gallant admiral and his heroic men were observed jumping over the sides of their ships into the sea and swimming toward shore. A glance through the telescope revealed the horrid truth. The Haitian vessels were not pursuing. They were being towed out to sea!

When the admiral landed, with his fine plumage bedraggled and spoiled, he said that the Germans had boarded his ship unawares and captured it while he was mapping out his plans for the glorious victory. He didn't think it was fair.

The president and his cabinet had to run, hot foot, to the German minister and promise to pay the indemnity at once if he would call the ships back.

And as the last straw to break their

THE new revolution in Santo Domingo against the government of President Wos y Gil is only one of many which have taken place in that unhappy country since the assassination of President Heureaux in 1899. Heureaux was an iron-hearted, heavyhanded tyrant who kept the public peace by the simple expedient of hanging or shooting all the turbulent characters he could lay his hands upon. Since his death nobody has arisen strong enough to preserve order among the unruly Dominicans.

Ex-President Jinenez, in whose behalf this latest revolution is said to have been started, has a big reputation in the West Indies as "the man who euchred Uncie Sam." He is credited with an amusing little coup of his own at the expense of the United States government just after the declaration of war with Spain. General Gomez, the famous Cuban leader, was a Dominican by birth and a friend of Jimenez. He gave Jimenez a letter of recommenda-words: "Letter not sent to the Boston Adv."

The most interesting thing in connection with the letter, aside from the description of the country, is the reference made to the influx of immigrants and the manner in which the "overland" railroad (the Union Pacific) had added innovations to its equipment—even going so far as to have slats put in some of the passenger cars so immigrants and others could sleep at night, by furnishing their own bedding. To this comfort was also added wash basins for the use of patrons of the road while crossing the plains on the way to the Pacific coast or mining towns of the west. In brief, the letter of Mr. Allan tells the story of the west as it was told twenty-one years ago, later developments proving that Mr. Allan did not write of the west in vain.

Mr. Allan's letter:

Omaha, Nov. 1. 1882—If Whittier had seen the prairies of Nebraska as they appear today he could not have written anything more applicable when he says:

The autumn time has come when he are the common to the steamer of the steame

He purchased a dog and a hunting suit, a brand new gun and a lot of shells; He wrote for terms to a farmer friend, enlisting a trusty guide.

And the day the hunting season began he hustled away, a happy man, Loaded down with sportsman things, none of which he had tried—And there he found, Upon the ground

Others, like him, full of hope and pride.

They took the field like an army corps, marching through stubble and brush. The guide was brave, though he faced their guns, and promised that he would stay;
But each man knew the danger that lies in wait for the man who closes his eyes when he shoots, so they kept theirs open wide and marched with joy to the fray;

And then at last,
As the morning passed,
A quall rose up and whirred away.

down; the dogs stood and the guns' tracks;
The triggers were pulled and the guns' reports resembled a cannon's roar.
The poor little quali turned a somersaultwas shot clear through to heaven's blue soult.

blue vault—
And they gathered around to jollify at their glorious gunshot score (Though none could tell Whose shotted shell Had spilled the little fowl's gore!)

And that was the only bird they saw;
but, nevertheless, today
They have him stuffed and placed in a case in a club not far away,
And they point with pride to this patent fact—they hunted with so much care
They shot neither guide nor friend nor dog—and that is a record rare!

THE confidence of the public is a priceless asset io a jeweler, and if he has not that confidence he is poor indeed. A mercantile house without the confidence of the people is in a more deplorable condition than an individual without friends.

Occasionally a prospective purchaser of a diamand confronts a problem---he doubts his own ability to select a diamond of proper merits and doubts the integrity of most jewelers. It is no more pleasant for a diamond merchant to have a customer state that he is not sure of the integrity of this merchant's house, than it would be for one man to insinuate to another that he questions the other's honor, simply because he never met him before---neither would there be more reason in the first than in the last.

The diamond business is peculiar in that great deception can be practiced by unscrupulous dealers with small chance of detection ---however, honesty is a more common trait than dishonesty and a thinking public should know that business success results only from continued square dealing.

WE ARE SUCCESSFUL and this alone should convince those who reason, that they can safely place confidence in our goods and guarantees. It would be a disreputable community indeed that could not boast of one diamond dealer who would serve the public honorably and well. Few houses in any city in America have the immense stock of mounted and unmounted diamonds and other gems, and the facilities for showing them afforded at Leysons, and this season particularly, we are provided with the most beautiful gems ever offered in Salt Lake. Our handsome mahogany diamond room, elegantly furnished and equipped offers every comfort to the buyer and affords a privacy furnished by no other house in Zion.

It is a buyer's privilege to be deliberate in selecting a diamond and we have spared no expense to show to those who visit us every courtesy extended by the largest houses in America.

Remember that the value of a diamond depends on its purity of color and degree of perfection. We show the demerits as well as the merits of all diamonds offered for sale and if any customer is dissatisfied with his purchase, we will refund the money paid.

Come to us expecting the truth about diamonds, because we offer no substitute.
